

Research Announcement: Moody's - 2021 outlook for US not-for-profit and public healthcare sector remains negative on constrained revenue, rising costs

New York, December 11, 2020 --

- » Median operating cash flow will drop 10%-15% in 2021 from Moody's annualized third-quarter 2020 estimate
- » Softer demand for certain services due to coronavirus fears will continue until pandemic ends

The outlook for the US not-for-profit and public healthcare sector in 2021 remains negative, Moody's Investors Service says in research published today. Volume and service mix disruption, reduced commercial insurance revenues from elevated unemployment, and higher expenses will weigh on hospitals amid the coronavirus crisis. The pace and sustainability of recovery from last spring's nationwide mandatory elective shut down will be influenced by containment of the virus and widespread vaccination.

"The negative outlook for the not-for-profit and public healthcare sector assumes that COVID-19 vaccines won't be widely available before the middle of next year," said Moody's Vice President Diana Lee. "Meanwhile, soft demand for some services and the ongoing shift toward lower-cost settings will contribute to median operating cash flow dropping 10%-15% in 2021 from our annualized third-quarter 2020 estimate."

Patient volumes will remain constrained due partly to fears about coronavirus exposure, Lee says. At the same time, labor and supply costs will increase, especially amid new COVID-19 surges. Moody's outlook assumes there will be no additional federal aid similar to CARES Act grants.

Meanwhile, elevated joblessness will lead to growth in the Medicaid and uninsured population as individuals lose employer-sponsored commercial insurance, which is usually more profitable than government-provided coverage. Additionally, as baby boomers move out of commercial healthcare plans, hospitals will become more dependent on Medicare revenue.

The not-for-profit and public healthcare sector's recovery from the effects of the pandemic will be uneven and differ by region and by facility, Moody's says. Overall, large, diverse healthcare systems and/or those with more cash will be best positioned to resume growth, while smaller standalone hospitals will likely consider partnerships. Hospitals also stand to lose revenue if the Affordable Care Act is overturned in the absence of a replacement plan, and if there are cuts to Medicaid funding.
